Note: “Notorious Thugs” is the opening track of the second disc of Life After Death, The Notorious B.I.G.’s second studio album, released 16 days after his murder in 1997. The track features Bone Thugs-N-Harmony, a hip hop group that Lobel has represented. The lyrics include multiple religious references, including when Layzie Bone says that he is “comin’ in the form of scripture,” and when Bizzy Bone raps: “My Messiah’s better get ready for Armageddon, shit;s expired / It’s wild, bless the child, the one that became a man.”

Note: Bizzy Bone, a member of Bone Thugs-N-Harmony, recalls the story behind the group’s collaboration with The Notorious B.I.G. on “Notorious Thugs.” When asked how the track came together, he answers: “It was a P. Diddy and Steve Lobel thing. They put it together.”

Subtitle: Song, 2018

Note: This track, featuring Bone Thugs-N-Harmony, was released in 2018 on Wiz Khalifa's sixth studio album, Rolling Papers 2. The title and lyrics "reach for the stars" signal ambition but also could allude to their aspiration to reach heavens or a godlike status. Indeed, Wiz raps in the first verse: "Everyday gotta thank God again."

Note: Wiz Khalifa recalls three phone calls with Lobel, including when Lobel told him that Bone Thugs-N-Harmony was interested in working with him on a song. Wiz describes it as a dream come true, given his longtime admiration of the hip hop group, to collaborate on what became "Reach for the Stars." Interestingly, the interview shows how a Jewish manager helped unite artists with ties to Christian and Muslim faiths.

Note: This video, posted in 2018, shows Lobel smoking in a recording studio with Wiz Khalifa and Bone Thugs-N-Harmony. This was likely filmed as the artists recorded their collaboration Reach for the Stars, which was released that year. Wiz passing the blunt to Lobel is a symbol that their relationships are not entirely professional but social, too.

8. Title: Mann - Buzzin \(Remix\) ft. 50 Cent [2011]

Subtitle: Music Video, 2011

Note: The artist Mann reinforces the theme of the shared pursuit of money in his 2011 hit single “Buzzin’.” In the music video for the remix, which features 50 Cent and cash raining down on female dancers, Lobel is briefly shown dapping up Mann at 2:05. As he raps about making money selling records, Mann says: “Taught the game by Steve Lobel / So we always win, don’t receive no L’s.”
